Ethnocultural dynamics and politics in a globalized world

Présentation

Description

Since the 1980s, the advent of neo-liberalism has enacted both the idea of freedom but also that of the dilution of borders, societal and political benchmarks in favor of uncontrollable rules of the global market. Rethinking intercultural dynamics therefore implies a critical review of the relationship between nation, ethnicity and the political project of "living together".

Objectifs

This course aims at revisiting the concept of otherness in the light of majority and minority perspectives.
