Présentation

Description

Strategy is a complex topic since it forces managers to consider both internal and external levers to be able to make smart decisions for the future. In this regard, students are expected to master technical tools, and to learn to think in a way that is quite unique in the business world. This course considers those two dimensions through a strong theoretical background transmission, and a direct application of all concepts to a real project. Sessions are harmonized between theory and practice to optimise students' involvement.
